Miss Laura Standiford, of San Francisco, has entered suit there for $3,500 as the price of a pint of blood she gave in a vain attempt to save the life of a neighbor, whose husband offered her only $3, although her arm is disfigured for life.

FOREIGN DEBTS MUST BE PAID DECLARES GARY

'Steel Man' Would Not Cancel Nor Reduce Them, He Says

New York, Dec. 1.—An unconditional opposition to either the cancellation or the reduction of the debts of foreign nations to the United States was expressed here by Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation. Such an act, he said, would be one of mistaken generosity and would benefit neither this country nor the debtor nation.

Judge Gary also declared in favor of an amendment or recasting of the present tax laws. Touching on the proposed soldiers' bonus he hoped the soldiers themselves would wait until a more propitious time before formally asking for such a dispensation. He expressed the hope that through the leadership of the president and the support of public opinion, taxes would be readjusted despite the vacillations and obstructions of politicians.

"In the matter of our foreign debt," he said, "there is at present a strenuous agitation in favor of canceling or reducing the debts of foreign countries to the United States. From the viewpoint of the United States, and also many foreign countries who borrowed money at a time when it was very much needed, with conditional promises to pay, the proposition would appear to be irrational and preposterous. To the ordinary American mind it is unthinkable." Continuing, he said:

"If our United States congress should vote in favor of any reduction in the principal of the foreign debts, whether as an act of generosity or otherwise, it would receive no genuine response of gratitude from the debtor and, on the contrary, it would be charged by a majority at least of the people of this country with attempting to contribute the moneys of others from motives that are not commendable."

"It has been asserted by certain foreign nations that they are willing to pay their debts when their debtors pay them and not before. Did anyone ever before hear such a condition insisted upon by any self-respecting, solvent individual or nation? Does anyone of these foreign nations allow individual debtors to other individuals to postpone payment until the debtors have collected their claims against third parties?"

In regard to the soldiers' bonus, the judge said the first consideration should be for the injured. "However," he continued, "if a majority of the soldiers should in any formal manner make requests for payment of a bonus, it is certain the national vote would favor it."

When "King David" fled the Shinn moved to Chicago, where his stopdaughter, Gladys, alleges, Shinn continues the so-called purification rites performed at Benton Harbor, and on her story he was arrested on statutory charges.

FARMER-LABOR GROUP MAKES ADVENT, G. O. P. MAJORITY INSECURE

Party Lines Are Vague on Eve of Opening of Session
Monday—18 New Senators Will Take Seats
For First Time

Washington, Dec. 1.—The Senate of the Sixty-eighth Congress, which convenes on Monday, presents a complexity of membership which probably is without parallel in the annals of the American Senate.

Not only is the group of 18 new Senators one of the largest in years, but the personnel itself includes a type that is new and strange to the upper chamber of Congress. For the first time the Farmer-Labor Party is represented.

With some notable exceptions the new Senators bring into the Senate little or no experience in national political affairs. Few have held other than minor and relatively unimportant state affairs.

These men, for the most part, and more particularly those from the Middle and Far West, have been thrust into national prominence through what commonly is referred to as the "progressive appeal to the voters." Regardless of party affiliations many of them can be classed together in that new belief in politics that is opposed to the conservative and the reactionary. Many cannot be labeled or pigeonholed as Republican, Democratic or Farmer-Labor, despite what party flag they flew at the time of election.

Never has the Senate seen such a large influx of members who cannot be counted upon always as "being within the party reservation." Most of them were elected on the stand that they would vote for principle rather than for party.

A dove of peace fluttered above the capitol today when the Republican majorities in the House and Senate met in secret sessions to perfect their organization of the new Congress.

Harmony prevailed at both ends of the capitol because the insurgent Progressive group bolted the Senate caucus and the House Republicans held a conference which was not binding on insurgents in the lower branch. The administration "tickets" as a result, faced no serious opposition. The fighting will come later.

Senate leaders announced that they had expected the president to deliver his message Tuesday. The plan on that side was to adjourn immediately after convening Monday out of respect to senators who have died during the adjournment period, then adjourn Tuesday out of respect to the late President Harding, whose death Mr. Coolidge will officially announce to Congress.

Delivery of the president's message, however, is contingent upon both houses organizing. Should the house become deadlocked indefinitely Mr. Coolidge could send forward his message in writing to both houses, which would enable the senate to have it read, regardless of the house situation.

There were between 25 and 30 representatives at the progressive conference. Besides the 10 Wisconsin Republicans, some of the others were: Davis, Knutson and Keller, Minnesota; Woodruff, Michigan; La Guardia, New York. Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, presented his plan for liberalizing the rules, but stated that he would not join in the movement to tie up organization.

Chairman Nelson stated there would be 20 or more standing solidly against the re-election of Speaker Gillett. Most of them will vote for Cooper of Wisconsin, while some of the others will give complimentary votes to members from their own states. With anything like a full membership of the Democrats present, this line up will make a majority for the Republicans impossible. A plurality is not sufficient to elect.

The legislative program of the progressives, as formally announced, includes farm relief measures; anti-child labor amendment; soldier bonus and aid for disabled veterans; lower freight rates and repeal or amendment of Esch-Cummings act; government control of necessities to prevent profiteering; abolition of tax exempt securities; and equalization of taxes by reducing levy on earned incomes and maintenance of present surtax.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Republican leaders in the senate virtually agreed upon final plans to take the two Farmer-Labor senators under their wing.

This will be effected through the parceling out of committee assignments, it having been decided by the reorganizers that the Farmer-Labor senators, Shipstead and Magnus Johnson, will be given important places on some of the major committees, where they will be given a chance to advance some of their ideas in legislation which caused them to be supported by the Farmer-Labor movement. Both the Farmer-Labor senators also decided to seat themselves on the Republican side of the chamber.

Republican leaders received a visit from Senators Swanson of Virginia and Harrison of Mississippi, who presented a demand from the Democrats for increased Democratic membership on the major committees. It is understood this proposition also will be agreed to by the Republican managers, and that committees which now have 10 Republican and six Democratic members will be reconstituted to have 10 Republicans and seven Democrats.

Swanson and Harrison pointed out to Lodge and others that the Republican membership in the new senate is much less than the Sixty-seventh congress, and that because of this the Democrats are entitled to larger representation.

TEAPOT DOME PROBE BRINGS STARTLING ATTACK ON A. B. FALL

Washington, Dec. 1.—The senatorial investigation into the leasing of Teapot Dome oil reserve to Harry F. Sinclair, suddenly went into sensational channels when the committee started delving into the private affairs and personal finances of Albert B. Fall, ex-secretary of the interior, who made the lease to the Sinclair interests.

Carl C. McGee, a newspaper editor of Albuquerque, N. M., appeared as a witness and told the committee that Fall was in such bad financial condition that county taxes on his ranch at "Three Rivers" were unpaid from 1912 to 1922. Two months after the Teapot Dome lease was let to Sinclair, McGee testified these taxes were paid and extensive improvements made to the ranch.

Senator Walsh, Democrat of Montana, a member of the committee substantiated McGee's claim to the extent of introducing sworn statements from the county tax collector showing that in June 1922, Fall paid back taxes and assessments which had been running since 1912.

The assessments to which McGee referred were on Fall's 1,868 acres of land at Three Rivers, New Mexico.

Immediately after hearing McGee's testimony the committee despatched a telegram to Fall at Three Rivers, asking him to return to Washington to testify concerning the Teapot Dome deal.

OHIO DEMOCRATIC LEADER IS DEAD

Columbus, Dec. 1.—James Ross, for years Democratic leader in Franklin county, died at his home here after a long illness. Following a light stroke of paralysis last Jan. 27, his condition became serious, and Ross was taken to Florida, where he convalesced sufficiently to return north in a few months. On his way north his condition again became serious and he stopped at White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., for treatment. Mrs. Ross, a son and daughter survive.

M'CRAY MAY AVOID FORMAL ARREST

Indianapolis, Ind., Dec. 1.—The formality of arrest may be avoided by Governor McCray in prompt filing today of the $25,000 bond requested by the Marion county criminal court following the returning of an indictment with 191 counts by the county grand jury.

Charged with almost every crime in the category of high finance, including embezzlement, note forgery, grand larceny and issuing fraudulent checks and deserted by his political friends, Governor McCray stood ready to fight back as best he could.

"I ask the public to reserve judgment," the governor said.

GALE IN PACIFIC WRECKS SHIPPING

San Francisco, Dec. 1.—Gales which blew from 50 miles an hour on San Francisco bay to 75 and 90 miles an hour at sea, played havoc early today with shipping.

The big freighter Robin Gray, just in from Honolulu, with a crew of 31 aboard, pulled her anchors and was blown on a rocky jet near the old yacht harbors.

Two tugs immediately went to her assistance and she was refloated at dawn with little damage. Her crew was saved.

The army tug El Agador was driven against her wharf with such force that a huge hole was stove in her bow. This vessel was reported in a sinking condition. Another army tug went to her assistance.

A dozen craft, large and small, were swept from their moorings and all available tugboats patrolled the bay, assisting those in need of help.

SECOND STATUE TAKEN FROM TOMB

Luxor, Dec. 1.—After opening the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen Howard Carter and his staff removed the second life-size statue of King Tut, wrapping it in a shroud of cotton cloth for removal to Cairo. The work occupied most of the morning as great care must be taken in handling the statue, the wood of which crumbles unless handled with gentleness. The second sepulchre is now used as a workshop by members of Carter's staff, and it is here that they will preserve the statues. Carter hopes to have all the shrines and coffin cases in the mortuary chapel dismantled by the middle of January. By that time, all the objects will be removed which are not to be left in the tomb.

ANTI-KLAN BILL MAY BE REDRAFTED

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 1.—Redrafting of the senate's anti-klan bill will be attempted by opposition senators. They will attempt to incorporate the membership publicity feature. The fight is expected to begin Monday.

An important development was the appearance of N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma klan, before the probing committee. Jewett insisted that only $15,000 had been spent in Oklahoma on a patriotic law enforcement program, and that no influence over legislators had ever been undertaken by klan officials. He admitted writing a letter which was published in the newspapers at that time, urging klan membership to try to protect the organization against unreasonable assaults.

Navy May Play on Coast.
Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1.—It is by no means certain that the naval academy football eleven will play at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's day, as planned, now that the University of California, the Pacific coast champion, has declined to be its opponent. The original arrangement with the Tournament of Roses association, which stages the game, was that the Navy's opponents would be the champion of the Pacific coast. The Universities of Leland Stanford, Washington and Southern California have been named as possible opponents, and one of these may yet be accepted.

NAME EXPERTS TO STUDY CONDITIONS

Paris, Dec. 1.—With the British and French agreeing that there can be no appreciable payment of reparations by Germany until German finances have been restored, the reparations commission named a committee of experts to study the relict's budget and currency, and another to study and place a value on Germany's resources abroad, with a program for utilizing them.

After the meeting Sir John Bradbury, British representative, stated that the situation was satisfactory. He added that eventually the question of reducing the amount of German indebtedness would have to be taken up, as would also the question of whether the costs of French and Belgian occupation should be subtracted from reparations payments before division among the allies.

Monroe Policy Held Essential to U. S. Safety.

Hughes For Rigid Enforcement of Old Doctrine.

Philadelphia, Dec. 1.—Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes declared here that vigorous enforcement of the Monroe doctrine as a policy is essential to national safety and continued friendly relations with the peoples of this hemisphere.

His address was made before the American Academy of Political and Social Science and the Philadelphia forum at the celebration of the centenary of the doctrine. The high point of his observations was:

"The future holds infinite possibilities, and the doctrine remains as an essential policy to be applied wherever any exigency may arise requiring its application. To withdraw it or to weaken it would aid no just interest, support no worthy cause, but simply would invite trouble by removing an established safeguard of the peace of the American continents."

Hughes' reference to American participation in European disputes was this: "We desire to co-operate according to our historic policy in the peaceful settlement of international disputes, which embraces the policy of judicial settlement of such questions as are justiciable."

While much of Mr. Hughes' address was devoted to an academic discussion of the origin of the Monroe doctrine and the reasons for its continued maintenance and application for the past 100 years, he closed by setting forth a number of affirmative policies pertaining to the conduct of the states and responsibilities to other American states.

Secretary Hughes declared that the United States recognized the equality of the American republics; that all states have duties as well as rights; that a consociatory policy strikes at the foundation of international intercourse; that it is the policy of the American government to assist in promoting stability in republics of the western hemisphere, and to seek to encourage making of agreements for limitation of armaments. Mr. Hughes concluded:

"We have certain special policies of the highest importance to the United States. We intend in all circumstances to guard the Panama canal. We could not afford to take any different position with respect to any other waterway that may be built between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans. With respect to Cuba we have the special interests arising from our treaty and our part in the securing of her independence."

SPRING VALLEY

The Xenia K.A.A.'s will close their season at Washington Park Sunday afternoon when they meet the fast Dayton All Stars at two o'clock.

The K.A.A.'s have had two hard practice sessions during the past week and no excuse can be offered if the local outfit should lose. Coach Rachford gave the barbers a few new plays and pointed out the mistakes made in Sunday's game with the Bulldogs. All the players are in excellent condition with the exception of Foley who will probably not be used unless the tide of the battle is going the other way.

The All Stars are plenty good and are coming to Xenia with the intention of handing the locals a pastime.

The barbers will have in their lineup, Cowan and Purdon at the flanks, Beals and McCoy at tackles, Lucas and Fudge at guards, Yeakley or Rachford at center. McFadden will call the signals while Bud Owens, Heery and F. Leahy will lug the ball. Captain Foley may break in before the game is many minutes old. The price of admission will be 35 cents and 15 cents for women.

The O. S. and S. O. Home basketball team opened its 1923-24 court season at the Armory Hall Thursday evening by handing the Dayton Dominoes the short end of a 43 to 26 score.

Woods was first to score with a long shot from the center of the floor. Zoog followed with a pair of baskets and this seemed to be the signal for the Home lads to start as they swung their scoring machine into action and made baskets from all angles of the court.

The Cadets put up a stubborn defense which caused the losers considerable trouble when they attempted to work the ball down for close up shots at the net. Brewster sparked on the defense and time and again took the ball from the banking board and got the leather out of dangerous territory. All the Dominoes' field goals were from the center of the floor.

Zoog at right forward was the big noise for winners. This lad kicked in with 25 of the 43 points scored by his team. Sherman and Woods also showed up well in the initial game. Quigley and Flynn were the main stays for the Dayton outfit.

Lineup and summary:

Home—43	Dominoes—26
Oblinger	L. F. Quigley
Zoog	R. F. Slife
Sherman	C. Shaner
Brewster	L. G. Foller
Woods	R. G. Flynn

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Memphis, Tenn.—“Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do my work except a little at a time, and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw your little book on to my porch, and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles, and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all of my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health.”—Mrs. O. J. HINCKLEY, 316 Union Ave., Memphis, Tenn.

GOLDEN RULE DAY GAINS POPULARITY

Sunday Dec. 2nd To Be Widely Observed

Prominent Americans Who Will Observe Golden Rule Sunday

As Sunday, December 2, the day on which the whole civilized world is asked to observe the first “International Golden Rule Day,” draws near, the offices of the Near Relief, the organization sponsoring the movement in America, are daily inundated with a flood of letters and postcards from people in all parts of the country, many of them nationally known figures, expressing a willingness to join in observance of the day.

From the number of pledges already received it is estimated that at least a million Americans will celebrate Golden Rule Day, not by feasting, but by fasting or otherwise practicing some act of self denial in order that others may not starve. The most popular method appears to be that of foregoing the usual Sunday dinner and eating instead, a meal similar to that given every day to the Near East Relief orphans and contributing the difference in cost to the relief work.

In addition to the widespread observance of the day in this country, people in 14 European and Asiatic countries will observe the day in the same way, making their contributions through their own national relief agencies.

Among the well-known Americans who have pledged themselves to eat a “Golden Rule” dinner are President Calvin Coolidge, ex-President Woodrow Wilson, Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, Senator King of Utah, ex-Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, the Honorable Henry Morgenthau, and many others. Foreign nations are represented on the Golden Rule roster by such names as age orphan meal, consisting of soup, bread and stew or corn grits and condensed milk, does not exceed 5 cents per person the saving should be substantial. The National Headquarters of the Near East Relief at 151 Fifth Avenue, New York City, or the nearest state office can furnish full details as to the proper sort of food to serve for a Golden Rule Dinner with recipes for preparing it.

LIQUOR DRINKING IS GAMBLING WITH DEATH

Six deaths from drinking poisonous alcohol and more than 500 arrests for drunkenness is last week-end record for Philadelphia, revealing the extent to which open and unchecked violations of the prohibition laws are permitted there. This deplorable showing is not to be taken, as some opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment and the State and Federal enforcement acts would pretend, as an indictment of the laws, but is a deeply significant revelation of the failure of the police, Federal, State and city, to compel obedience of those enactments.

Nor should the appalling death list and the large number of cases of drunkenness which reach the police station dockets be considered a measure of the attitude of the community at large toward the prohibitory legislation. The law-breakers—whether as bootleggers, saloonkeepers or distillers of the forbidden beverages, or as patrons of this illicit traffic—constitute a very small proportion of the whole population.

The great mass of the people look with deep satisfaction upon the passing of the saloon and the destruction of the whiskey trade. When they think about the matter at all it is to depreciate the noisy minority who refuse to obey the law and who have so little control over their appetites as to "gamble with death" by drinking the deadly concoctions offered them in the guise of liquor.

WOOD FORCING FILIPINO ISSUE TO SHOWDOWN

Governor General Wood has vetoed, as he did in 1922, the bill remitting the penalties for non-payment of land tax during 1923, basing his actions on his original theory that it is demoralizing to laws encouraging tax delinquents, the legislature is sure to pass the bill over his veto, putting the issue up to President Coolidge.

The President's course will be closely watched as proof whether Governor Wood has full U. S. support. Manuel Quezon, President of the Senate, talked with the Governor for a full hour, urging him not to veto the bill, which was taken as an indication of a desire on the part of the coalition to make peace if possible. Financial conditions clearly were not responsible for the passage of the bill but the political leaders promised action when campaigning last year and must save their face.

General opinion favors action on the resolution proposed by Senator King of Utah, urging Congress to declare for the withdrawal of American sovereignty in the belief that it would force a definite expression of policy from Congress and the administration.

"THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST"

"The last shall be first," so the Good Book tells, and I know that it is true. And this is the tale of a cunning mind which gave me a laugh or two. There were twelve of us bound for a little town, and we sat in the smoker's gloom. And discussed our chance there and then of getting a hotel room; But one man, old in the traveling game, said casually to us: "I've made this town a hundred times and they'll meet you with a bus."

The bus was there when the train pulled in, and we made a rush for it. We scrambled, luggage and weary men, for a chance in the rig to sit. But the wise old traveling man got up in an indolent sort of way. And took his time to walk the stretch from the platform to the door. He stood at the steps with his hat in hand and helped old women in. And he piled their baggage at their feet with a most delightful grin.

I never dreamed he could be so deep or could play so sharp a trick. I never dreamed that a grip or two made a barricade so thick. But I noticed at last when we started off, this courtly man and kind. Hadn't left a seat for himself inside, but was hanging on behind. I was sorry for him in my childlike way, but I grieve for him no more. For he gave one leap for the clerk inside when we reached the hotel door.

We were blocked in the bus by cases large, by bundles and baskets, too. A fat old lady barred the way, as fat old ladies do. But at last we got to the clerk inside, and he said with a look of gloom: "I'm sorry, gents, but the first chap in has taken our only room." Then it dawned on us how we'd all been tricked, and that kindly man we cursed. For we'd learned that the last man on the bus to the hotel clerk comes first.

ALL LIFE CAN GIVE

What is life's pleasure made of? The light of a baby's smile. The blend of the sun and shade of The world for a little while.

The song of the kettle singing, The peace of the living room. The joy of a few friends bringing The charm of the world to bloom.

A robe for the wintry weather,

A book and an open fire. A family knit together By love and the same desire.

Food on the oaken table. Sleep when the day is done. Health to be fit and able. Each morning to carry on.

Simple are life's real pleasures From birth to our silent graves. These are all that a rich man treasures.

And all that a poor man craves.

THE SONG OF THE WINDS

The stars stand out like diamonds in the blue night sky. A new moon over the tree tops is set in the midst of their marvelous clusters like a cameo.

Autumn leaves are hurry-scurrying across the dying blades of summer grass. The bare limbs of the trees sway to and fro.

The winds are singing their songs. As from a distance the roll is heard, like soft thunder. Then near, and nearer, and a mad gust whistles and sweeps its way past, and on.

There is a melancholy tone to the song of the autumn winds unlike that of early spring or summer.

But there is beauty in every wind's voice, come from where it may and at whatever time.

What silent memories are hidden in the mind—wrapped as it were by the billions off atoms off the air. And how these memories come rushing up on us as we sit in meditation alone, wondering about this strange force of nature's movement.

I go to my window and see the glitter of thousands of lights—the city aglow. Trees away, their top branches fanning the semi-darkness as the wind sends its notes vibrating down each tiny twig.

Sometimes I liken the song of these winds to the song of the soul. For we are ever touching the chords of nature that its music may color the drabness of our common place moments and put a little glow of gold there.

There is something soothing to me about the song of the winds. Perhaps it is because I feel that it is a message from me sent from some place afar—full of understanding.

GENERAL VIEW OF BAY OF NAPLES AND CITY FROM TOMB OF VIRGIL—(MT. VESUVIUS IN BACKGROUND)

Magnificent site. At one time capital of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. Ancient Castle dell'Ovo, and legend of the enchanted egg on which safety of the city was to depend. Enormous fortress of Saint Elmo, built in the fourteenth century, now a military prison. Densely populated city, through all its history of Europe. Frightful epidemic of cholera in 1884 caused oldest part of city to be pulled down. Most wonderful aquarium in the world.

LILIAN HAYDEN HESTON

THE ancient city called Neapolis remained and flourished after its sister city of Parthenope, also settled by Greeks, disappeared. This was in 328, B. C., when the Romans conquered both. Neapolis, wise in its day, made friends with the conquerors and received aid and protection. The population, however, retained their Greek culture and institutions. It became the favorite resort of the wealthy Romans, owing to its superb climate and picturesque beauty. Roman emperors and citizens as well as poets and scholars flocked there. We find that Ovid, Horace and Virgil had villas there. The city even at that far-distant time was a mile square and very thickly settled. In its suburbs along the beautiful Bay of Naples were erected villas whose magnificence surpassed even those of Rome. This was also true of the islands in the bay and the shores near Amalfi and Sorrento, just beyond Naples.

The rich and important Kingdom of the Two Sicilies included Naples and became a centre of learning and science to which scholars came from all Europe.

Castle dell'Ovo

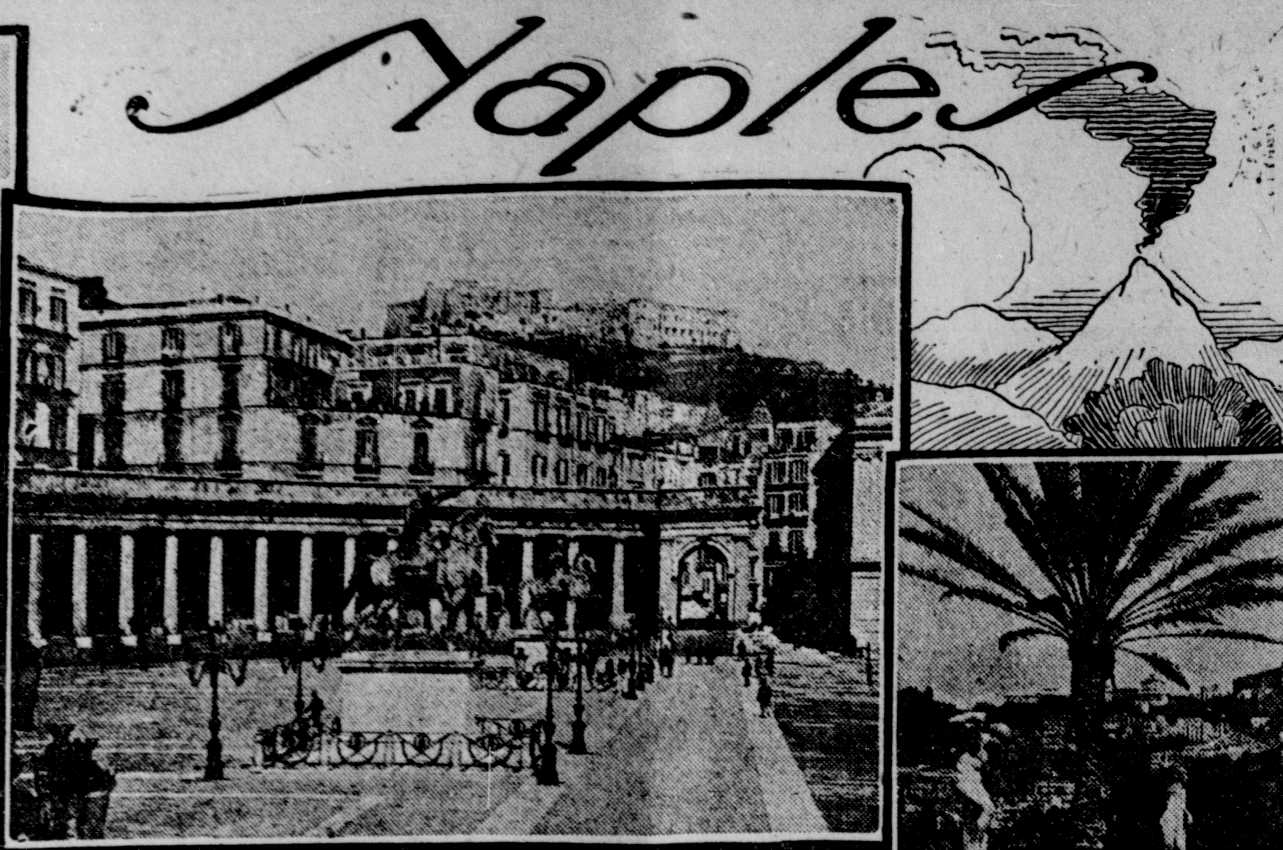

On a small island which at low tide adjoins the coast is an ancient castle called in Italian the Castle dell'Ovo, this word means egg, and there are two legends in explanation. One is that the island and its castle were shaped like an egg, but far more romantic is the tale that an ancient magician presented someone with a magic egg or which the whole safety and future of the city depended. This egg was carefully sealed up in some part of the castle named for it. It was safe and therefore the city grew and became ever more wealthy and prosperous. It must still be there for Naples seems ever to increase in beauty and in popularity.

The old saying "see Naples and die," which tourists, before the very old part of the city was modernized, say they nearly did on account of the dirt and odors, never was rightly understood. The quotation was from an enthusiastic lover of the region and said that everyone should see both Naples and another little town close by, whose name in the Italian was similar to the verb meaning to die. Thus do one's very simplest utterances lead to confusion.

Picturesque Old Streets

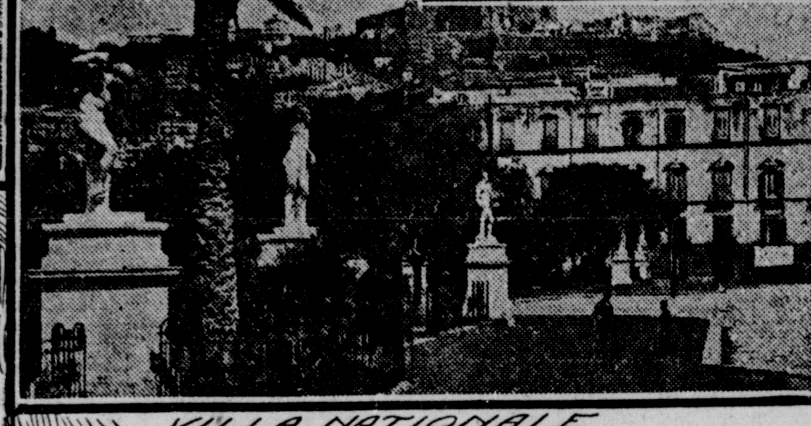

The city was at one time in three distinct parts. One was the very old portion near the water, with very narrow streets and in describing old and dilapidated buildings, but picturesque beyond all words and the adored of artists. One of these dear old streets was on the sea wall and

OLD PALACE AND CASTLE OF ST. ELMO, NOW A MILITARY PRISON

SEAWALL AND CASTLE DELL'OVO (RIGHT)

was called Santa Lucia. Alas, it is all torn down now and magnificent hotels occupy the site. Years ago it was the most fascinating street in the world. The old houses were very tall and filled by thousands of poor people who lived not in their tiny dark rooms but on the sidewalks. At each step were steaming cauldrons where cooking was done. Next was a woman washing soiled clothes, then several combing their hair and elaborately dressing it. There were barbers shaving men; there were men, women and children in all stages of dress and undress. Babies were hushed to sleep there or washed, public letter-writers wrote diligently at their rickety tables. The Tarantella was joyously danced before the mixed audience. All life went on as unconcernedly as if the people were in their private homes. Boys caught their heads between their feet and rolled along the pavement for a chance penny. It is one of the most vivid recollections of my life, being led along this street when I was a very little girl, and we lived for a few months on the hill in Naples. It was a short cut to one of the largest banks and we often went by but I recall that my hand was always tightly clutched and my intense interest in the people discouraged. One thing that especially fascinated me was the flocks of goats that were driven along and milked whenever a customer wanted milk. Another interesting fact was that if anyone happened to be upstairs one did not come down to buy any commodity, but let down a long cord with a basket and the money and goods, usually food of some kind, were thus exchanged. Naples scarcely seems Naples to me without that fascinating street.

Resident And Industrial Section

Another quarter of the city was the elegant residence district where were beautiful gardens and villas and large hotels. This interested me not at all because it was like all other such places in other cities. If I had not been carefully watched I feel sure I would have passed all my time in the Santa Lucia. I envied all the little children wading in the bay and was never tired of seeing the boys make themselves into hoops and roll down hill.

Still another quarter was the industrial part, where were workmen and their workshops. Of late years this has been pushed far out into what was a suburb. The city grows and spreads out. The old parts are constantly being pulled down. Broad clean streets take the place of crowded and unsanitary alleys. Whole blocks of dark tenements are replaced by parks and flowers. In every case new quarters are first built by the government for the inhabitants, usually in some clean and healthy suburb, where every facility of tram and train is at their service for a merely nominal fee.

Notable Buildings

The sea life in the Mediterranean is, of course, the most varied one can find and the Aquarium is very complete. Tables and tanks for special work are rented at a low price to many of the universities of Europe which send students there to study. It is a never failing source of delight to watch the changing colors and queer forms of the wonderful sea life, both plants and animals.

The vast opera house of San Carlo is one of the largest in the world, and many are the famous singers that have been heard there. I had an amusing experience in it many years ago. A large festival was being held and one part consisted in hundreds of people entering with the flags of all nations. There were perhaps five or six thousand people as audience and as the hundreds of people marched across the stage bearing flags people cheered their own. When those bearing the American flags came across the stage triumphant and pleased, as it was the policy of the time to pay much tribute to the United States, there was a dead silence and then groans and hisses. There were many Americans present and they were aghast and angry to see that every flag had been nailed on its pole with the stars at the bottom. There was wild consternation as the actors and management did not know what was the matter. Finally they realized the situation and the curtain went down and stayed down till each of those flags was changed with the ensign where it belonged and then they came back. There was a wild cheering and clapping of hands in which every one in the vast theatre joined and it was long before the performance could go calmly on. It was evidently the work of careless or ignorant people doing the preparatory work in a hurry, but the effect was tremendous.

The vast castle of San Elmo, which is on the height and dominates the entire city, was first built in 1343 as a fortress by King Robert the Wise, Charles V. restored and partially rebuilt it in 1535. It was for many centuries considered almost impregnable. It is used as a military prison. The National Museum in Naples is remarkably rich in all Roman antiquities and in objects from Pompeii. Its sculptures, mosaics, ancient glass and bronzes are very beautiful.

History

It is useless to repeat what is the history of all those old cities. Greek settlers or Phoenicians, then Samnites, Romans, Ostrogoths, Saracens, Normans the great world-conquering emperors of Eastern Europe or of Spain, the French for a very brief period under Napoleon, Austrians, and a peaceful old age in United Italy as planned and carried out by Garibaldi. All this is read and forgotten. What remains is the play one sees, for as Tennyson says: "Things seen are mightier than things heard." One dreams of the Naples one has seen. The vast and gloriously lovely bay, Vesuvius smoking against the evening sky, the opal sea, the macaroni-eating, smiling, happy people, glad just to be alive in the sweet sunshine, the roguish, black-eyed children tumbling about, and rolling themselves in rings, the singing, the dancing, the street music, the flirtations in the moonlight, soft kisses heard as one passes by.

WINS LAURELS IN ROLE IN TOLEDO

Miss Hazel Shannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shannon of Wapakoneta, who are now here directing the cast of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" to be presented by Phi Delta Kappa for the benefit of the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association, is winning laurels as the lead in a winter stock company in Toledo.

Miss Shannon, who is well known here through her frequent appearances with the Shannon Stock Company with her brother, is starting with the Toledo Theater Stock Company, which opened this week with "Peg O' My Heart." The Toledo News Bee says: "She came, was seen and conquered. There you have the story of Hazel Shannon's initial appearance with the Toledo Theater Stock Company, her introductory vehicle, 'Peg O' My Heart' proving admirable in every respect."

"The new leading lady is an entirely different type from any introduced in the past two seasons. This in itself proves a point in her favor, because there is always a lure in the different. She has a winning personality. She is a little bit of a person but mighty as Peg. In this character she becomes thoroughly Irish. You'll like Miss Shannon."

OBSERVE "GOLDEN RULE" SUNDAY IN
NOVEL WAY IS PLEA

"Whatsoever ye would that others should do unto you do ye even so to them" will be the motto followed by thousands over the United States, Sunday, in observance of "Golden Rule Sunday."

Postured by the Near East Relief Association, the plan is to urge every one to follow a menu served the starving orphans of the Near East, and to pay the balance of his usual Sunday dinner to the Near East Relief fund. Menus and recipes concocted by the leading dieticians of the country, have been received by the local ministers, but did not arrive in time for distribution. The aim of "Golden Rule Sunday" is to arouse sympathy and interest in the plight of the unfortunate children of the far-off countries. Those who follow the plan are asked to bring the money to Church services to be forwarded to the Near East Relief Committee.

"Golden Rule" Sunday has been commended by President Calvin Coolidge and other leading Americans. The outstanding thought is to give the difference between the cost of the usual Sunday dinner and the less expensive orphanage menus, as a Thank Offering or as the basis for a more substantial contribution for the purchase of food for the orphans during the remainder of the year.

Samples of the menus planned for the day are: Stewed beans with onions and oil, bread, cocoa; Fricassee of Mutton with steamed potatoes, mashed eggplant or carrots and old fashioned rice pudding; lamb en casserole, pilaf, graham bread, grapes or raisins, tea or cocoa with condensed milk; cream of corn grits soup stuffed eggplant with tomato sauce.

JIM SAVES THE SITUATION

Chapter 28

At the lunch table Cynthia suddenly dropped a bomb into the conversation.

"Lee told me about that wonderful five-pound trout that was caught a few days ago down by the island. I'd simply love to see one. Can't we go fishing tomorrow?" she asked eagerly, addressing herself to Jim who was at that moment engaged in passing around a hot supply of fried trout.

"Can if you want'er, I guess," he returned incredulously.

"And Jim! Who was it caught the fish anyway? Lee never told me," she interrogated, including them both in her sudden impetuous question.

Lee's heart stopped short for a second and his eyes sought Jim's face. He longed to drop through the cabin floor. He waited breathlessly for Jim's answer. But Jim's expression never wavered. He leaned over and held the plate so Cynthia could help herself to the tempting trout.

"That fish was caught by a fellow that's got a camp here on the lake. Want to meet him?" he asked with a sudden upward movement of the deep laughing lines around his keen eyes. "I'll try and fix it up for yer if you say the word," he added, giving Lee a reassuring wink.

Lee's heart dropped back into place and started beating violently as if someone had forced it suddenly down his throat. But he felt like hugging Jim. He hadn't believed it was in him to be so intuitively clever. But more than that, it had never entered his head that Jim could be so observing. It was a shock to know that the old fellow realized he didn't want Cynthia to know about Hope. He was dumbfounded—but relieved and thankful.

"Got your line out for aother snor, or Cynthia?" he taunted, coming back quickly into the conversation. "Cynthia warned me this morning that she was making a collection of them," he added with a grin toward Dale Hoff.

They both laughed, and Jim's expressive back disappeared into the kitchen.

"It's more fun fishing for men anyway," Cynthia flung at them defiantly. "There's always a chance of catching a better one, you know."

"What's your bait, Cynthia? It's blame effective," Lee declared half earnest and half jesting.

"Curiosity. Stimulate curiosity, Brownie, old dear. It'll catch anything," she answered laughingly with a quick tilt of her round chin. "Come Who's going fishing with me?" she added, as she arose from the table.

Lee sat and looked after her musingly, while Dale got up and followed her out on the porch. When he finally strolled out after them he discovered that they were just about to go off in the canoe. He stood and watched them silently. He was surprised to find that he didn't mind their going very much. On the contrary it was a relief. He was weary of trying to protect his thoughts and feelings for Hope from Cynthia.

He pulled a chair up near the railing, and sat down and stretched his legs out. He drew his pet briar pipe out of his pocket and filled it. Cynthia detested a pipe, so he never ventured to indulge in its comfort in her presence.

Jim came out on the porch and pulled up a chair and sat down alongside of him. They smoked in silence.

"Seen the Mrs.," Jim told him. "Greene?" Lee asked abruptly breaking the silence.

"Yep!" Jim answered. "Who'd you see?" Lee demanded, making no effort to conceal his eagerness.

"Seen the Mrs.," Jim told him. "Tell her we had company?" Lee questioned uneasily.

"Nope!" Jim returned laconically, but for Lee it was sufficient.

He wanted to ask a lot more questions, but he didn't. Even if Jim had made some clever observations, he wasn't going to bare his feelings entirely.

They smoked on in silence; and though Lee's feet remained over the porch railing, his thoughts traveled to the high rocky cliff and waited there for Hope. Was it possible that she was there too, he wondered.

Tomorrow—Dale and Cynthia Make a Discovery.

TEAPOT DOME PROBE BRINGS STARTLING ATTACK ON A. B. FALL

Washington, Dec. 1.—The senatorial investigation into the leasing of Teapot Dome oil reserve to Harry F. Sinclair, suddenly went into sensational channels when the committee started delving into the private affairs and personal finances of Albert B. Fall, ex-secretary of the interior, who made the lease to the Sinclair interests.

Carl C. McGee, a newspaper editor of Albuquerque, N. M., appeared as a witness and told the committee that Fall was in such bad financial condition that county taxes on his ranch at "Three Rivers" went unpaid from 1912 to 1922. Two months after the Teapot Dome lease was let to Sinclair, McGee testified these taxes were paid and extensive improvements made to the ranch. Senator Walsh, Democrat of Montana, a member of the committee substantiated McGee's claim to the extent of introducing sworn statements from the county tax collector showing that in June, 1922, Fall paid back taxes and assessments which had been running since 1912.

SECOND STATUE TAKEN FROM TOMB

Luxor, Dec. 1.—After opening the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen Howard Carter and his staff removed the second life-size statue of King Tut, wrapping it in a shroud of cotton cloth for removal to Cairo. The work occupied most of the morning as great care must be taken in handling the statue, the wood of which crumbles unless handled with gentleness. The second sepulchre is now used as a workshop by members of Carter's staff, and it is here that they will preserve the statues. Carter hopes to have all the shrines and coffin cases in the mortuary chapel dismantled by the middle of January. By that time, all the objects will be removed which are not to be left in the tomb.

FOREIGN DEBTS MUST BE PAID DECLARES GARY

Steel Man Would Not Cancel Nor Reduce Them, He Says

New York, Dec. 1.—An unconditional opposition to either the cancellation or the reduction of the debts of foreign nations to the United States was expressed here by Judge E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel corporation. Such an act, he said, would be one of mistaken generosity and would benefit neither this country nor the debtor nation.

Judge Gary also declared in favor of an amendment or recasting of the present tax laws. Touching on the proposed soldiers' bonus he hoped the soldiers themselves would wait until a more propitious time before formally asking for such a dispensation. He expressed the hope that through the leadership of the president and the support of public opinion, taxes would be readjusted despite the vaccinations and obstructions of politicians.

"In the matter of our foreign debt," he said, "there is at present a strenuous agitation in favor of canceling or reducing the debts of foreign countries to the United States. From the viewpoint of the United States, and also many foreign countries who borrowed money at a time when it was very much needed, with conditional promises to pay, the proposition would appear to be irrational and preposterous. To the ordinary American mind it is unthinkable." Continuing, he said:

"If our United States congress should vote in favor of any reduction in the principal of the foreign debts, whether as an act of generosity or otherwise, it would receive no genuine response of gratitude from the debtor and, on the contrary, it would be charged by a majority at least of the people of this country with attempting to contribute the moneys of others from motives that are not commendable."

"It has been asserted by certain foreign nations that they are willing to pay their debts when their debtors pay them and not before. Did anyone ever before hear such a condition insisted upon by any self-respecting, solvent individual or nation? Does anyone of these foreign nations allow individual debtors to other individuals to postpone payment until the debtors have collected their claims against third parties?"

In regard to the soldiers' bonus, the judge said the first consideration should be for the injured. "However," he continued, "if a majority of the soldiers should in any formal manner make requests for payment of a bonus, it is certain the national vote would favor it."

ANTI-KLAN BILL MAY BE REDRAFTED

Oklahoma City, Okla., Dec. 1.—Redrafting of the senate's anti-klan bill will be attempted by opposition senators. They will attempt to incorporate the membership publicity feature. The fight is expected to begin Monday.

An important development was the appearance of N. C. Jewett, grand dragon of the Oklahoma klan, before the probing committee. Jewett insisted that only $15,000 had been spent in Oklahoma on a patriotic law enforcement program, and that no influence over legislators had ever been undertaken by klan officials. He admitted writing a letter which was published in the newspapers at that time, urging klan membership to try to protect the organization against unreasonable assaults.

Navy May Play on Coast.

Annapolis, Md., Dec. 1.—It is by no means certain that the naval academy football eleven will play at Pasadena, Cal., on New Year's day, as planned, now that the University of California, the Pacific coast champion, has declined to be its opponent. The original arrangement with the Tournament of Roses association, which stages the game, was that the Navy's opponents would be the champions of the Pacific coast. The Universities of Leland Stanford, Washington and Southern California have been named as possible opponents, and one of these may yet be accepted.

"SECURITY" HAS NO WEIGHT, BELGIUM

London, Dec. 1.—It is learned from a reliable diplomatic source that the Belgians are pressing for a return to an early date to "invisible occupation" in the Ruhr. The Belgians point out that they are unable to depart from their original declaration that their participation in the occupation was solely with the object of securing reparations, and that the later consideration on the part of France as regards "security" can not be allowed to have weight with Belgium.

At the same time instructions have been received by the French ambassador in London to endeavor to negotiate a new defensive French-British pact in aerial and naval matters, the land forces not being mentioned, as an answer to the Spanish-Italian entente. It is understood, however, that Britain will not enter any pact designed to operate against Spain and Italy.

FARMER-LABOR GROUP MAKES ADVENT, G. O. P. MAJORITY INSECURE

Party Lines Are Vague on Eve of Opening of Session
Monday—18 New Senators Will Take Seats
For First Time

Washington, Dec. 1.—The Senate of the Sixty-eighth Congress, which convenes on Monday, presents a complexity of membership which probably is without parallel in the annals of the American Senate.

Not only is the group of 18 new Senators one of the largest in years, but the personnel itself includes a type that is new and strange to the upper chamber of Congress. For the first time the Farmer-Labor Party is represented.

With some notable exceptions the new Senators bring into the Senate little or no experience in national political affairs. Few have held other than minor and relatively unimportant state affairs.

These men, for the most part, and more particularly those from the Middle and Far West, have been thrust into national prominence through what commonly is referred to as the "progressive appeal to the voters." Regardless of party affiliations many of them can be classified together in that new belief in politics that is opposed to the conservative and the reactionary. Many cannot be labeled or pigeonholed as Republican, Democratic or Farmer-Labor, despite what party flag they flew at the time of election.

Never has the Senate seen such a large influx of members who cannot be counted upon always as "being within the party reservation." Most of them were elected on the stand that they would vote for principle rather than for party.

A dove of peace fluttered above the capitol today when the Republican majorities in the House and Senate met in secret sessions to perfect their organization of the new Congress.

Harmony prevailed at both ends of the capitol because the insurgent Progressive group bolted the Senate caucus, and the House Republicans held a conference which was not binding upon insurgents in the lower branch. The administration "tickets" as a result, faced no serious opposition. The fighting will come later.

Senate leaders announced that they had expected the president to deliver his message Tuesday. The plan on that side was to adjourn immediately after convening Monday out of respect to senators who have died during the adjournment period, then adjourn Tuesday out of respect to the late President Harding, whose death Mr. Coolidge will officially announce to congress.

Delivery of the president's message, however, is contingent upon both houses organizing. Should the house become deadlocked indefinitely Mr. Coolidge could send forward his message in writing to both houses, which would enable the senate to have it read, regardless of the house situation.

There were between 25 and 30 representatives at the progressive conference. Besides the 10 Wisconsin Republicans, some of the others were: Davis, Knutson and Keller, Minnesota; Woodruff, Michigan; La Guardia, New York. Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of New York, presented his plan for liberalizing the rules, but stated that he would not join in the movement to tie up organization.

Chairman Nelson stated there would be 20 or more standing solidly against the re-election of Speaker Gillett. Most of them will vote for Cooper of Wisconsin, while some of the others will give complimentary votes to members from their own states. With anything like a full membership of the Democrats present, this line up will make a majority for the Republicans impossible. A plurality is not sufficient to elect.

The legislative program of the progressives, as formally announced, includes farm relief measures; anti-child labor amendment; soldier bonus and aid for disabled veterans; lower freight rates and repeal or amendment of Esch-Cummings act; government control of necessities to prevent profiteering; abolition of tax exempt securities, and equalization of taxes by reducing levy on earned incomes and maintenance of present surtax.

Washington, Dec. 1.—Republican leaders in the senate virtually agreed upon final plans to take the two Farmer-Labor senators under their wing.

This will be effected through the parceling out of committee assignments, it having been decided by the reorganizers that the Farmer-Labor senators, Shipstead and Magnus Johnson, will be given important places on some of the major committees, where they will be given a chance to advance some of their ideas in legislation which caused them to be supported by the Farmer-Labor movement. Both the Farmer-Labor senators also decided to seat themselves on the Republican side of the chamber.

Republican leaders received a visit from Senators Swanson of Virginia and Harrison of Mississippi, who presented a demand from the Democrats for increased Democratic membership on the major committees. It is understood this proposition also will be agreed to by the Republican managers, and that committees which now have 10 Republican and six Democratic members will be reconstituted to have 10 Republicans and seven Democrats.

Swanson and Harrison pointed out to Lodge and others that the Republican membership in the new senate is much less than the Sixty-seventh congress, and that because of this the Democrats are entitled to larger representation.

HOME QUINTET WINS OPENING GAME WITH DOMINOES 43 TO 26

The O. S. and S. O. Home basketball team opened its 1923-24 court season at the Armory Hall Thursday evening by handing the Dayton Dominoes the short end of a 43 to 26 score.

Woods was first to score with a long shot from the center of the floor. Zoog followed with a pair of baskets and this seemed to be the signal for the Home lads to start as they swung their scoring machine into action and made baskets from all angles of the court.

The Cadets put up a stubborn defense which caused the losers considerable trouble when they attempted to work the ball down for close up shots at the net. Brewster sparked on the defense and time and again took the ball from the banking board and got the leather out of dangerous territory. All the Dominoes' field goals were from the center of the floor.

Zoog at right forward was the big reason for winners. This lad kicked in with 25 of the 43 points scored by his team. Sherman and Woods also showed up well in the initial game. Quigley and Flynn were the main stays for the Dayton outfit.

Lineup and summary:

Sherman C. Shaner
Brewster L. G. Foller
Woods R. G. Flynn

Curious Facts Concerning the Book of Books

The Bible has 1189 chapters; 929 belong to the Old Testament and 260 to the New. The 117th Psalm is the middle chapter of the Bible, its number being 595. Exactly 594 chapters precede it, and 594 follow it.
The middle chapter of the Bible is also the shortest; containing only 33 words, composed of 133 letters. The longest is the 119th Psalm, containing 176 verses, 2,445 words, and 10,146 letters.
The text of the Bible is divided into 31,101 verses; 23,144 for the Old, and 7,957 for the New Testament. The shortest verse in the Bible is John XI: 35, containing only two words with nine letters. One verse in the Bible contains all the letters of the alphabet except J—Ezra 7: 21.
The famous inscription on the Liberty Bell, in Independence Hall, Philadelphia, is taken from Leviticus 25:10. It reads, "Proclaim liberty throughout all the land unto all the inhabitants thereof."

MRS. HINKLEY NERVOUS WRECK

Tells Women How She Was Restored to Perfect Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Memphis, Tenn.—“Two years ago I was completely run-down and my nerves were a wreck. I could not sweep a room without resting. I could not do my work except a little at a time, and the doctor's medicine did not help me. One day some one threw your little book on to my porch, and in it I read several testimonials of women who had been like myself. I went right out and got me a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and before I had taken the whole of that bottle I knew it was helping me. I took six bottles, and then in about three months I took two more. Now I am in perfect health. I do all of my own work and could do more. I can truly say that I know Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound gave me my health.”—Mrs. O. J. HINKLEY, 316 Union Ave., Memphis, Tenn.

GOLDEN RULE DAY GAINS POPULARITY

Sunday Dec. 2nd To Be Widely Observed

Prominent Americans Who Will Observe Golden Rule Sunday

Fourteen Nations Beside U. S. Join in Aiding Near East Sufferers.

As Sunday, December 2, the day on which the whole civilized world is asked to observe the first “International Golden Rule Day,” draws near, the offices of the Near Relief, the organization sponsoring the movement in America, are daily inundated with a flood of letters and postcards from people in all parts of the country, many of them nationally known figures, expressing a willingness to join in observance of the day.

From the number of pledges already received it is estimated that at least a million Americans will celebrate Golden Rule Day, not by feasting, but by fasting or otherwise practicing some act of self denial in order that others may not starve. The most popular method appears to be that of foregoing the usual Sunday dinner and eating instead, a meal similar to that given every day to the Near East Relief orphans and contributing the difference in cost to the relief work.

In addition to the widespread observance of the day in this country, people in 14 European and Asiatic countries will observe the day in the same way, making their contributions through their own national relief agencies.

Among the well-known Americans who have pledged themselves to eat a “Golden Rule” dinner are President Calvin Coolidge, ex-President Woodrow Wilson, Secretary of State Charles E. Hughes, Senator King of Utah, ex-Governor Henry J. Allen of Kansas, John J. Tigert, United States Commissioner of Education, the Honorable Henry Morgenthau, and many others. Foreign nations are represented on the Golden Rule roster by such names as

M. Georges Clemenceau of France, Miss Megan Lloyd George, daughter of England's famous “Little Welshman,” the King and Queen of Greece, Prince Carl of Sweden, Dr. Fridtjof Nansen of Norway, and a host of others. In many American cities local Golden Rule Clubs have been organized with all the members pledged to eat the refugee rations for one meal, on December 2. As the cost of the average orphan meal, consisting of soup, bread and stew or corn grits and condensed milk, does not exceed 5 cents per person the saving should be substantial. The National Headquarters of the Near East Relief at 151 Fifth Avenue, New York City, or the nearest state office can furnish full details as to the proper sort of food to serve for a Golden Rule Dinner with recipes for preparing it.

LIQUOR DRINKING IS GAMBLING WITH DEATH

Six deaths from drinking poisonous alcohol and more than 500 arrests for drunkenness is last week-end record for Philadelphia, revealing the extent to which open and unchecked violations of the prohibition laws are permitted there. This deplorable showing is not to be taken, as some opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment and the State and Federal enforcement acts would pretend, as an indictment of the laws, but is a deeply significant revelation of the failure of the police, Federal, State and city, to compel obedience of those enactments.

Nor should the appalling death list and the large number of cases of drunkenness which reach the police station dockets be considered a measure of the attitude of the community at large toward the prohibitory legislation. The law-breakers—whether as bootleggers, saloonkeepers or distillers of the forbidden beverages, or as patrons of this illicit traffic—constitute a very small proportion of the whole population.

The great mass of the people look with deep satisfaction upon the passing of the saloon and the destruction of the whiskey trade. When they think about the matter at all it is to deprecate the noisy minority who refuse to obey the law and who have so little control over their appetites as to "gamble with death" by drinking the deadly concoctions offered them in the guise of liquor.

WOOD FORCING FILIPINO ISSUE TO SHOWDOWN

Governor General Wood has vetoed, as he did in 1922, the bill remitting the penalties for non-payment of land tax during 1923, basing his actions on his original theory that it is demoralizing to laws encouraging tax delinquents, the legislature is sure to pass the bill over his veto, putting the issue up to President Coolidge.

The President's course will be closely watched as proof whether Governor Wood has full U. S. support. Manuel Quezon, President of the Senate, talked with the Governor for a full hour, urging him not to veto the bill, which was taken as an indication of a desire on the part of the coalition to make peace if possible. Financial conditions clearly were not responsible for the passage of the bill but the political leaders promised action when campaigning last year and must save their face.

General opinion favors action on the resolution proposed by Senator King of Utah, urging Congress to declare for the withdrawal of American sovereignty in the belief that it would force a definite expression of policy from Congress and the administration.

"THE LAST SHALL BE FIRST"

"The last shall be first," so the Good Book tells, and I know that it is true. And this is the tale of a cunning mind which gave me a laugh or two. There were twelve of us bound for a little town, and we sat in the smoker's gloom. And discussed our chance there and then of getting a hotel room; But one man, old in the traveling game, said casually to us: "I've made this town a hundred times and they'll meet you with a bus."

The bus was there when the train pulled in, and we made a rush for it. We scrambled, luggage and weary men, for a chance in the rig to sit. But the wise old traveling man got up in an indolent sort of way. And took his time to walk the stretch from the platform to the door; He stood at the steps with his hat in hand and helped old women in. And he piled their baggage at their feet with a most delightful grin.

I never dreamed he could be so deep or could play so sharp a trick, I never dreamed that a grip or two made a barricade so thick. But I noticed at last when we started off, this courtly man and kind. Hadn't left a seat for himself inside, but was hanging on behind.

I was sorry for him in my childlike way, but I grieve for him no more. For he gave one leap for the clerk inside when we reached the hotel door. We were blocked in the bus by cases large, by bundles and baskets, too; A fat old lady barred the way, as fat old ladies do. But at last we got to the clerk inside, and he said with a look of gloom: "I'm sorry, gents, but the first chap in has taken our only room."

Then it dawned on us how we'd all been tricked, and that kindly man we cursed. For we'd learned that the last man on the bus to the hotel clerk comes first.

ALL LIFE CAN GIVE

What is life's pleasure made of? The light of a baby's smile. The blend of the sun and shade of The world for a little while.

The song of the kettle singing, The peace of the living room. The joy of a few friends bringing The charm of the world to bloom.

A robe for the wintry weather,

A book and an open fire. A family knit together By love and the same desire.

Food on the oaken table. Sleep when the day is done. Health to be fit and able Each morning to carry on.

Simple are life's real pleasures From birth to our silent graves. These are all that a rich man treasures. And all that a poor man craves.

THE SONG OF THE WINDS

The stars stand out like diamonds in the blue night sky. A new moon over the tree tops is set in the midst of their marvelous clusters like a cameo.

Autumn leaves are hurry-scurrying across the dying blades of summer grass. The bare limbs of the trees sway to and fro.

The winds are singing their songs. As from a distance the roll is heard, like soft thunder. Then, near, and nearer, and a mad gust whistles and sweeps its way past, and on.

There is a melancholy tone to the song of the autumn winds unlike that of early spring or summer.

But there is beauty in every wind's voice, come from where it may and at whatever time.

What silent memories are hidden

in the mind—wrapped as it were by the billions off atoms off the air. And how these memories come rushing up on us as we sit in meditation alone, wondering about this strange force of nature's movement.

I go to my window and see the glitter of thousands of lights—the city aglow. Trees away, their top branches fanning the semi-darkness as the wind sends its notes vibrating down each tiny twig.

Sometimes I liken the song of these winds to the song of the soul. For we are ever touching the chords of nature that its music may color the drabness of our common place moments and put a little glow of gold there.

There is something soothing to me about the song of the winds. Perhaps it is because I feel that it is a message for me sent from some place afar—full of understanding.

GENERAL VIEW OF BAY OF NAPLES AND CITY FROM TOMB OF VIRGIL (MT. VESUVIUS IN BACKGROUND)

Magnificent site. At one time capital of the Kingdom of the Two Sicilies. Ancient Castle dell'Ovo, and legend of the enchanted egg on which safety of the city was to depend. Enormous fortress of Saint Elmo, built in the fourteenth century, now a military prison. Densely populated city, through all its history of Europe. Frightful epidemic of cholera in 1884 caused oldest part of city to be pulled down. Most wonderful aquarium in the world.

LILLIAN HAYDEN HUESTON

THE ancient city called Neapolis remained and flourished after its sister city of Parthenope, also settled by Greeks, disappeared. This was in 328, B. C., when the Romans conquered both. Neapolis, wise in its day, made friends with the conquerors and received aid and protection. The population, however, retained their Greek culture and institutions. It became the favorite resort of the wealthy Romans, owing to its superb climate and picturesque beauty. Roman emperors and citizens as well as poets and scholars flocked there. We find that Ovid, Horace and Virgil had villas there. The city even at that far-distant time was a mile square and very thickly settled. In its suburbs along the beautiful Bay of Naples were erected villas whose magnificence surpassed even those of Rome. This was also true of the islands in the bay and the shores near Amalfi and Sorrento, just beyond Naples.

The rich and important Kingdom of the Two Sicilies included Naples and became a centre of learning and science to which scholars came from all Europe.

Castle dell'Ovo

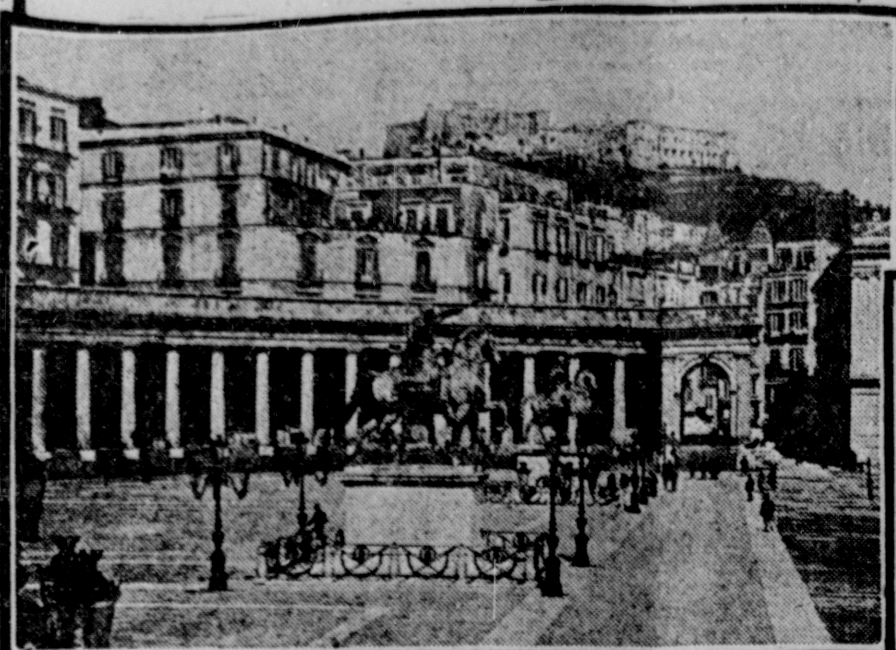

On a small island which at low tide adjoins the coast is an ancient castle called in Italian the Castle dell'Ovo. This word means egg, and there are two legends in explanation. One is that the island and its castle were shaped like an egg, but far more romantic is the tale that an ancient magician presented someone with a magic egg on which the whole safety and future of the city depended. This egg was carefully sealed up in some part of the castle named for it. It was safe and therefore the city grew and became ever more wealthy and prosperous. It must still be there for Naples seems ever to increase in beauty and in popularity. The old saying "see Naples and die," which tourists, before the very old part of the city was modernized, say they nearly did on account of the dirt and odors, never was rightly understood. The quotation was from an enthusiastic lover of the region and said that everyone should see both Naples and another little town close by, whose name in the Italian was similar to the verb meaning to die. Thus do one's very simplest utterances lead to confusion.

Picturesque Old Streets

The city was at one time in three distinct parts. One was the very old portion near the water with very narrow streets and in describing old and dilapidated buildings, but picturesque beyond all words and the adored of artists. One of these dear old streets was on the sea wall and

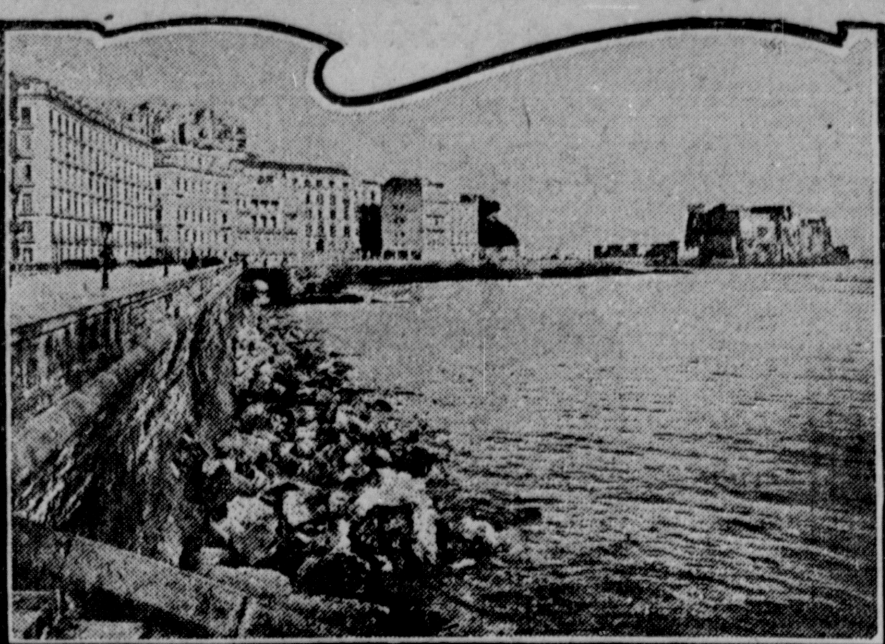

Naples

OLD PALACE AND CASTLE OF ST. ELMO, NOW A MILITARY PRISON

VILLA NAZIONALE

was called Santa Lucia. Alas, it is all torn down now and magnificent hotels occupy the site. Years ago it was the most fascinating street in the world. The old houses were very tall and filled by thousands of poor people who lived not in their tiny dark rooms but on the sidewalks. At each step were steaming cauldrons where cooking was done. Next was a woman washing soiled clothes, then several combing their hair and elaborately dressing it. There were men, women and children in all stages of dress and undress. Babies were hushed to sleep there or washed, public letter-writers wrote diligently at their rickety tables. The Tarantella was joyously danced before the mixed audience. All life went on as unconcernedly as if the people were in their private homes. Boys caught their heads between their feet and rolled along the pavement for a chance penny. It is one of the most vivid recollections of my life, being led along this street when I was a very little girl, and we lived for a few months on the hill in Naples. It was a short cut to one of the largest banks and we often went by but I recall that my hand was always tightly clutched and my intense interest in the people discouraged. One thing that especially fascinated me was the flocks of goats that were driven along and milked whenever a customer wanted milk. Another interesting fact was that if anyone happened to be upstairs one did not come down to buy any commodity, but let down a long cord with a basket and the money and goods, usually food of some kind, were thus exchanged. Naples scarcely seems Naples to me without that fascinating street.

Resident and Industrial Section

Another quarter of the city was the elegant residence district where were beautiful gardens and villas and large hotels. This interested me not at all because it was like all other such places in other cities. If I had not been carefully watched I feel sure I would have passed all my time in the Santa Lucia. I envied all the little children wading in the bay and was never tired of seeing the boys make themselves into hoops and roll down hill.

Still another quarter was the industrial part, where were workmen and their workshops. Of late years this has been pushed far out into what was a suburb. The city grows and spreads out. The old parts are constantly being pulled down. Broad clean streets take the place of crowded and unsanitary alleys. Whole blocks of dark tenements are replaced by parks and flowers. In every case new quarters are first built by the government for the inhabitants, usually in some clean and healthy suburb, where every facility of tram and train is at their service for a merely nominal fee.

Notable Buildings

The sea life in the Mediterranean is, of course, the most varied one can find and the Aquarium is very complete. Tables and tanks for special work are rented at a low price to many of the universities of Europe which send students there to study. It is a never failing source of delight to watch the changing colors and queer forms of the wonderful sea life, both plants and animals.

The vast opera house of San Carlo is one of the largest in the world, and many are the famous singers that have been heard there. I had an amusing experience in it many years ago. A large festival was being held and one part consisted in hundreds of people entering with the flags of all nations. There were perhaps five or six thousand people as audience and as the hundreds of people marched across the stage bearing flags people cheered their own. When those bearing the American flags came across the stage triumphant and pleased, as it was the policy of the time to pay much tribute to the United States, there was a dead silence and then groans and hisses. There were many Americans present and they were agitated and angry to see that every flag had been nailed on its pole with the stars at the bottom. There was wild consternation as the actors and management did not know what was the matter. Finally they realized the situation and the curtain went down and stayed down, till each of those flags where it belonged and then they came back. There was a wild cheering and clapping of hands in which every one in the vast theatre joined and it was long before the performance could go calmly on. It was evidently the work of careless or ignorant people doing the preparatory work in a hurry, but the effect was tremendous.

The vast castle of San Elmo, which is on the height and dominates the entire city, was first built in 1343 as a fortress by King Robert the Wise, Charles V. restored and partially rebuilt it in 1535. It was for many centuries considered almost impregnable. It is used as a military prison. The National Museum in Naples is remarkably rich in all Roman antiquities and in objects from Pompeii. Its sculptures, mosaics, ancient glass and bronzes are very beautiful.

History

It is useless to repeat what is the history of all those old cities. Greek settlers or Phoenicians, then Samnites, Romans, Ostrogoths, Saracens, Normans the great world-conquering emperors of Eastern Europe or of Spain, the French for a very brief period under Napoleon, Austrians, and a peaceful old age in United Italy as planned and carried out by Garibaldi. All this is read and forgotten. What remains is the play one sees, for as Tennyson says: "Things seen are mightier than things heard." One dreams of the Naples one has seen. The vast and gloriously lovely bay, Vesuvius smoking against the evening sky, the opal sea, the macaroni-eating, smiling, happy people, glad just to be alive in the sweet sunshine, the roguish, black-eyed children tumbling about, and rolling themselves in rings, the singing, the dancing, the street music, the flirtations in the moonlight, soft kisses heard as one passes by.

WINS LAURELS IN ROLE IN TOLEDO

Miss Hazel Shannon, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Shannon of Wapakoneta, who are now here directing the cast of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" to be presented by Phi Delta Kappa for the benefit of the McKinley Parent-Teacher Association, is winning laurels as the lead in a winter stock company in Toledo.

Miss Shannon, who is well known here through her frequent appearances with the Shannon Stock Company with her brother, is starting with the Toledo Theater Stock Company, which opened this week with "Peg O' My Heart." The Toledo News Bee says: "She came, was seen and conquered. There you have the story of Hazel Shannon's initial appearance with the Toledo Theater Stock Company, her introductory vehicle, 'Peg O' My Heart' proving admirable in every respect."

"The new leading lady is an entirely different type from any introduced in the past two seasons. This in itself proves a point in her favor, because there is always a lure in the different. She has a winning personality. She is a little bit of a person but mighty as Peg. In this character she becomes thoroughly Irish. You'll like Miss Shannon."

OBSERVE "GOLDEN RULE" SUNDAY IN
NOVEL WAY IS PLEA

"Whatever ye would that others should do unto you do ye even so to them" will be the motto followed by thousands over the United States, Sunday, in observance of "Golden Rule Sunday."

Fostered by the Near East Relief Association, the plan is to urge every one to follow a menu served the starving orphans of the Near East, and to pay the balance of his usual Sunday dinner to the Near East Relief fund. Menus and recipes concocted by the leading dieticians of the country, have been received by the local ministers, but did not arrive in time for distribution. The aim of "Golden Rule Sunday" is to arouse sympathy and interest in the plight of the unfortunate children of the far-off countries. Those who follow the plan are asked to bring the money to Church services to be forwarded to the Near East Relief Committee.

"Golden Rule" Sunday has been commended by President Calvin Coolidge and other leading Americans. The outstanding thought is to give the difference between the cost of the usual Sunday dinner and the less expensive orphanage menus, as a Thank Offering or as the basis for a more substantial contribution for the purchase of food for the orphans during the remainder of the year.

Samples of the menus planned for the day are: Stewed beans with onions and oil, bread, cocoa, Ericasee of Mutton with steamed potatoes, mashed eggplant or carrots and old fashioned rice pudding; lamb en casserole, pilav, graham bread, grapes or raisins, tea or cocoa with condensed milk; cream of corn grits soup stuffed eggplant with tomato sauce.

JIM SAVES THE SITUATION

Chapter 28

At the lunch table Cynthia suddenly dropped a bomb into the conversation.

"Lee told me about that wonderful five-pound trout that was caught a few days ago down by the island. I'd simply love to see one. Can't we go fishing tomorrow?" she asked eagerly, addressing herself to Jim who was at that moment engaged in passing around a hot supply of fried trout.

"Can if you want'er, I guess," he returned incredulously.

"And Jim! Who was it caught the fish anyway? Lee never told me," she interrogated, including them both in her sudden impetuous question.

Lee's heart stopped short for a second and his eyes sought Jim's face. He longed to drop through the cabin floor. He waited breathlessly for Jim's answer. But Jim's expression never wavered. He leaned over and held the plate so Cynthia could help herself to the tempting trout.

"That fish was caught by a fellow that's got a camp here on the lake. Want to meet him?" he asked with a sudden upward movement of the deep laughing lines around his keen eyes. "I'll try and fix it up for yer if you say the word," he added, giving Lee a reassuring wink.

Lee's heart dropped back into place and started beating violently as if someone had forced it suddenly down his throat. But he felt like hugging Jim. He hadn't believed it was in him to be so intuitively clever. But more than that, it had never entered his head that Jim could be so observing. It was a shock to know that the old fellow realized he didn't want Cynthia to know about Hope. He was dumbfounded—but relieved and thankful.

"Got your line out for aother son or Cynthia?" he taunted, coming back quickly into the conversation. "Cynthia warned me this morning that she was making a collection of them," he added with a grin toward Dale Hoff.

They both laughed, and Jim's expressive back disappeared into the kitchen.

"It's more fun fishing for men anyway," Cynthia flung at them defiantly. "There's always a chance of catching a better one, you know."

"What's your bait, Cynthia? It's blame effective," Lee declared half earnest and half jesting.

"Curiosity. Stimulate curiosity, Brownie, old dear. It'll catch anything," she answered laughingly with a quick tilt of her round chin. "Come Who's going fishing with me?" she added, as she arose from the table.

Lee sat and looked after her musingly, while Dale got up and followed her out on the porch. When he finally strolled out after them he discovered that they were just about to go off in the canoe. He stood and watched them silently. He was surprised to find that he didn't mind their going very much. On the contrary it was a relief. He was weary of trying to protect his thoughts and feelings for Hope from Cynthia.

He pulled a chair up near the railing, and sat down and stretched his legs out. He drew his pet briar pipe out of his pocket and filled it. Cynthia detested a pipe, so he never ventured to indulge in its comfort in her presence.

Jim came out on the porch and pulled up a chair and sat down alongside of him. They smoked in silence.

"Seen the Mrs.," Jim told him.

"Greene?" Lee asked abruptly breaking the silence.

"Yep!" Jim answered.

"Who'd you see?" Lee demanded, making no effort to conceal his eagerness.

"Seen the Mrs.," Jim told him.

"Tell her we had company?" Lee questioned uneasily.

"Nope!" Jim returned laconically, but for Lee it was sufficient.

He wanted to ask a lot more questions, but he didn't. Even if Jim had made some clever observations, he wasn't going to bare his feelings entirely.

They smoked on in silence; and though Lee's feet remained over the porch railing, his thoughts traveled to the high rocky cliff and waited there for Hope. Was it possible that she was there too, he wondered.

Tomorrow—Dale and Cynthia Make a Discovery.
